Nepal is in great need of systematic and scientific land use planning. Fertile cultivation lands declination, climate change, forest area declination is affecting the environment. The issue of land use planning is to be addressed soon. Nepal is in great need of systematic and scientific land use planning. Without a proper land-use plan, cities and communities would be in disarray. Transportation would not run efficiently. Industrial plants would pollute residences and waterways and reduce air quality. Cities would be unworkable. Communities would be unsafe. Economies would stall. The environment would be damaged and resources wasted, which would leave the area unusable for future generations.

In today's society, there is a growing awareness of our impact on the environment. We understand that each of our activities leaves a carbon footprint. This growing consciousness means that we are paying attention to our living and working patterns, how they intersect, and how to live in away that preserves the environment.

On account of fast-growing population, internal migration, unmanaged and rapid urbanization, among others, encroachment overable lands, forests, Government and public lands, various natural resources are rampant these days, and the protection there of has poised a challenge now. Disasterrisks such as: soil erosion, floods, and landslides are escalating by the impact of geographical and geological conditions and/oreco logical changes. Of course, a challenge has been there by poised to food security, secured human settlement, ecological balance and sustainable development. In order to manage such risks and challenges, a National Land Use Policy, 2013A.D. (2069B.S.)was adopted by Government of Nepal (GoN), Council of Ministersin the same year. The National Land Use Policy, 2013 A.D. prioritized the protection of arable lands ensuring food security. The devastating earthquake of April 25, 2015 A.D. and aftershocks there to have exposed us to non-vulnerable secured human settlement in the country. So then, awareness has come that only guide activities are allowed to be operated in such identified area so natural disasters.

The higher growth of population density, growing trend of urbanization, urbanizing Rural municipality situated at Palpa District and haphazard settlement in Tinau Rural Municipality त्रित्र प्रशासक्त आवक्ष have accounted the urgent need of Prioritizing physical, social and economic infrastructure development along with sustainable development in planned way in order to formulate and execute plans and projects in future. Any delay in addressing this problem would result in severe difficulties in efficient service delivery and infrastructure management for the Municipality.

Land use planning is the process of regulating the use of land by a central authority. Usually, this is done to promote more desirable social and environmental outcomes as well as a more efficient use of resources. More specifically, the goals of modern land use planning often include environmental conservation, restraint of urban sprawl, minimization of transport costs, prevention of land use conflicts, and a reduction in exposure to pollutants. In the pursuit of these goals, planners assume that regulating the use of land will change the patterns of human behavior, and that these changes are beneficial. The first assumption, that regulating land use changes the patterns of human behavior is widely accepted. However, the second assumption - that these changes are beneficial - is contested, and depends on the location and regulations being discussed.

In view of sustainable development, land use planning is seen as a political and technicaladministrative decision-making process agreed with social, economic, political and technical factors, for orderly occupation and sustainable use of the land under development. On the other hand, it seeks regulation and promotion of the location and sustainable development of human settlements, economic and social activities, and spatial physical development, based on the identification of potentialities and limitations that consider environmental, economic, socio-cultural, institutional and geopolitical criteria. By and large, these parameters are put in place in order to make sure that the environment is protected during land use or land development. Indeed, based on the recommendations of the United Nations in its Habitat conference, land is assigned a high importance for the development of human life as it is the fundamental support for its permanence and development, this being them important objective of the policy of human settlements. That is, the land resource is recognized as an essential element, which supports the social, political and economic formation of society. As mentioned earlier, the use of land refers to the occupation of a certain area according to it's a geological capacity and therefore its development potential, its classified according to its location as urban or rural, it represents a fundamental element for the development of the city and its inhabitants since it is from these that its urban structure is formed and therefore its functionality is defined. For this reason, there is a need to ensure sustainability in order to ensure that we continue to enjoy the benefits that come from urban planning and to ensure that future generations will continue enjoying these benefits.
